AB: Restructuring requires that educational leaders have new frameworks for interpreting participant behaviors. Paulo Freire has defined characteristics of people moving toward higher thinking levels and decision-making ability. Combining Freire's thoughts with restructuring provides a conceptual model allowing leaders to interpret the organizational environment so that higher cognitive abilities are recognized and participant decision making is enhanced (MLH).

AB: In the form of a story, this paper reveals the life and lifework of a committed Latino professor of English who was born in Brooklyn in the Bedford-Stuyvesant projects. First recounting the early years of a bright boy, the paper then proceeds to tell about the young man as a dropout, as a soldier in Vietnam, as a student in college, and then as a graduate student (while his wife supported the family). The paper then focuses on "Victor" as a teacher of basic writing to his mostly Mexican-American college students and Victor as a parent at highly charged discussions of curriculum in the local public schools. Pinpointing the discovery of Paulo Freire's "Pedagogy of the Oppressed" as a turning point in the teacher's life, the paper then concentrates on the many ups-and-downs that accompany Victor's attempts to modify the basic writing curriculum at the university to accommodate Freire's (and now his own) beliefs about literacy and cultural politics. The remainder of the book deals with the problems of the daily life of the teacher and his family; with personal thoughts about cultural and critical literacy; and with the preparation and publication by the National Council of Teachers of English of the teacher's memoir, "Bootstraps." AB: Noting that words like "alienation," "ideology," and "hegemony" are cropping up in academic journals (particularly those journals that concern themselves with rhetoric) with more and more frequency, this paper explains some of the basic terms used by the political left. The paper notes that such terms tend to come up even in everyday speech, but the meanings in everyday speech are at some remove from their specialized web of meanings. The second part of the paper discusses how Paulo Freire uses several of the terms. Terms defined in the paper include: alienation, "conscientizacão," dialectic, existentialism, hegemony, idealism, ideology, materialism, metaphysics, praxis, problematic, reification, structuralism, thesis, antithesis, synthesis, and war of positions. As far as classroom application of these terms, the paper suggests that when teachers claim they are going to show students how to think, it can too easily mean what to think. The paper points out that Freire would have teachers show students that they can think. A glossary of the terms is attached. (RS)

AB: This book focuses on functional and holistic approaches to English-as-a-Second-Language (ESL) literacy, including competency-based education; whole language, language experience, and [Freirean] or participatory, and writing-based programs that result in published materials to be read by other adults. Chapter 1, "Literacy Through a Competency-Based Educational Approach," by K. Lynn Savage, provides an overview of a functional approach that emphasizes life skills and evaluates mastery of those skills according to actual learner performance. Chapter 2, "Whole Language in Adult Literacy Education," by Pat Rigg and Francis E. Kazemek, discusses the whole language view of teaching and learning. In chapter 3, "The Language Experience Approach," Marcia L. Taylor describes the approach as a whole language approach to instruction that promotes reading and writing by transcribing a student's experiences with the transcription then used as reading material for the student. Joy Kreeft Peyton uses chapter 4, "Listening to Students' Voices: Publishing Students' Writing for Other Students To Read," to present the rationale for using the writings of adult ESL students as material for teaching literacy to other ESL adults. She outlines the steps involved in implementing a writing and publishing program and gives sources of materials written by adult literacy learners and descriptions of student publishing programs. David Spener gives an overview of "The Freirean Approach to Adult Literacy Education" in chapter 5. (Author/AB)

B: This book is an analytic and critical treatment of Paulo Freire's philosophy. Its two central theses are that Freire's thought is best understood as that of an educational practitioner and theorist and that the most fruitful interpretation of Freire comes from understanding him as a Catholic thinker. Chapter 1 situates Freire's lifelong work in Latin America and Africa. Chapter 2 presents a brief description of his now famous method of conscientization, the theoretical and practical center of his work. Chapter 3 explores the dialecticism of Freire's writings. Freire's philosophy of persons, society, knowledge, and political change are seen as closely related to his educational interests in the discussions presented in Chapters 4-7. Chapters 8 and 9 highlight his educational theories; the first details his criticisms of banking education (the view that knowledge is "deposited" in the minds of students by teachers); the other presents the constructive elements of his educational theory. The final chapter makes the case that Freire's work can rightly be considered as an integral part of the theology of liberation that prevails in even less developed nations. Appendices include 65 references and indexes of names and subjects. (YLP)

AB: The theoretical and educational perspective presented in this paper offers a foundation for the way in which communication becomes a tool to promote social economic expansion and awareness of multiple international cultural realities. Part I examines the philosophies of Paulo Freire and Peter Drucker, which provide the core of the paper. Part II defines communication as a semiotic language device, one among other systems with which the individual participates to organize, conceptualize, and change history. In Part III the role of communication in international business is examined as it provides a tool to clear the way toward bringing peoples' views together. Part IV describes traditional parameters of language beliefs, comparing them to a more progressive semiotic/psycholinguistic parameters. The five main language parameters are described under the following headings: (i) physiological; (ii) the nature versus nurture controversy; (iii) the concept of equilibrium; (iv) the constructivist versus the creative; and (v) the concept of history. In Part V, 7 general and 15 specific objectives are recommended for business communications educators to integrate and/or develop into communication courses. Contains 10 references. (RHO)

AB: When considering what type of communication is required for development, the conventional answer of diffusion of technological innovation for modernization and growth is inadequate. Daniel Lerner and Everett Rogers describe traditional people as the greatest obstacle to development. Paulo Freire perceives communication as an instrument for changing society versus persuasion and extension for the maintenance of the status quo and social control. Andreas Fuglede attacks the myth of people's ignorance and advocates cross-cultural communication. Third system communication organizes society with a reversal of authority. Development for the rural poor should, while not neglecting the sound economic base, be first and foremost development as if people mattered. Liberation from being passive recipients and toward an active citizenship is the essence of the new content of social development. By deduction, rural social development (RSD) will equally contain both these liberating and positively empowering aspects. Empowerment comes through participation. RSD communication will have to be participatory. Examples of participatory communication are the Kanyan DEP Program, indigenous nongovernmental organizations in West Africa, Organization of Rural Associations for Progress in Zimbabwe, and the Community Educational and Cultural Center in Kenya. AB: This module on the garbage crisis is for intermediate and advanced learners of English as a Second Language. It seeks to inform learners about this issue and to give them an opportunity to direct their concerns about the environment into positive action. The guide uses the problem-posing methodology of Paulo Freire. This methodology has three stages: listening, dialogue, and action. The module consists of five units: What Is Typical Household Garbage; Where Does This Garbage Go?; Where does It Come From?; and What Are We Doing to Reduce, Reuse, and Recycle Our Household Garbage? Questions for discussion are provided for each unit along with vocabulary, language, and thinking activities and actions for change exercises. A quiz called "The Great Recycling Quiz" is included that reviews the main points covered. A bibliography and important sources for information are contained in a resource section. All four language skills are addressed in each unit—speaking, listening, reading, and writing. (Adjunct ERIC Clearinghouse on Literacy Education) (LET)

AB: This report describes adult literacy needs, the role of the libraries in meeting those needs, literacy needs and services in New York, and the contributions the City University of New York (CUNY) is making to the literacy effort. Quotations from Paulo Freire and Jonathan Kozol are used to define the nature of illiteracy and its extent in the United States, and Federal Government literacy initiatives and the role of the American Library Association are reviewed. A discussion of New York State and New York City literacy needs and programs provides the context for a description of literacy programs sponsored by CUNY. Information is provided about funding levels of the CUNY literacy program, and brief descriptions of literacy programs at five of CUNY's campuses are given. The paper also includes a brief review of literacy activities at other institutions of higher education. It is concluded that CUNY libraries could serve as a bridge between the literacy classroom and the mainstream by collecting materials that would enable literacy students to make use of an academic library.  AB: An original reformulation of the meaning, potential, and practice of educational leadership, informed by notions of self and social empowerment, is provided. This book relies on a variety of theories derived from philosophic schools such as hermeneutics, critical theory, deconstructionism, and pragmatism. Arguments are presented in the following 10 chapters: (1) "Introduction: The Quest for Leadership"; (2) "Research on Leadership in Education"; (3) "Administrative Leadership, Democracy, and the Qualities of Philosophic Mind"; (4) "Educational Leadership and Policy"; (5) "Leadership and the Education of Young Children"; (6) "Moral Imagination and School Leadership"; (7) "Postmodernity and the Preparation of Educational Leaders for the Future"; (8) "Empowerment and Educational Leadership"; (9) "The Artist-Leader and the Problem of Design"; and (10) "Conclusion." The possibilities of leadership are expanded by addressing its relationship to authority and ethics, politics and power, and ideology and culture. The arguments set forth in this book build to the conclusion that what is needed in contemporary debates about school reform is the critically imaginative vision that sees leadership as a community effort to redesign schools for the maximization of the interests of the community. An index is appended. (Contains 205 references.) (MLF)

BIBLIOGRAFIA DE PAULO FREIRE

Venício Artur de Lima
Ph.D. em Comunicação pela Universidade de Illinois, EE.UU., e Professor Assistente da UnB. É autor de Comunicação e Cultura: As Ideias de Paulo Freire, que será lançado brevemente pela Editora 'Paz e Terra'.

Os escritos de Paulo Freire - principalmente aqueles produzidos durante seus 16 anos de exílio - foram publicados em muitos lugares diferentes, traduzidos para diversos idiomas e combinados em vários livros. Daí porque ao leitor brasileiro não é fácil encontrar uma relação da obra do famoso pensador pernambucano. Esta bibliografia, que é uma primeira tentativa, sabidamente incompleta, de suprir essa lacuna, foi elaborada obedecendo a uma dupla preocupação. Primeiro, oferecer uma lista-gem das publicações originais dos trabalhos de Freire, acompanhados, sempre que existente, da referência à tradução em português. Segundo, evitar a duplicidade de referências - o mesmo trabalho aparecendo sob títulos diferentes - problema bastante comum nas poucas bibliografias de Freire disponíveis publicadas em outras línguas. O pesquisador interessado em identificar as diversas traduções dos escritos de Freire deverá consultar a bibliografia compilada por A.G. Kallenberg e publicada em 1979 pelo "Centre for the Study of Education in Developing Countries", The Hague, Holanda, que contém a melhor relação disponível para o holandês, inglês, francês, alemão, italiano, espanhol e português.

Na Bibliografia oferecida a seguir, os escritos de Paulo Freire estão relacionados pela ordem cronológica de sua publicação original.
